And to show also the improved disposition of the natives, we will mention what occurred the other day at the Motueka, where a question respecting the reserves set aside for the Maories, which by delay and neglect had grown into what was apprehended would be a troublesome business, was disposed of with the greatest ease in a few hours. When the land was originally purchased of the natives, a tenth part of the whole was reserved for their use, to be held in trust for their future benefit. The unfortunate state in which the colony was placed for a few years, so deranged the trust which had been appointed to take charge of this property, that nothing was done with it, and the natives at the Motueka undertook, in several instances, to lease and sell parcels of the reserves in that district on their own account. The gentlemen recently appointed as the trust board, expected considerable difficulty in getting this property back into their hands, but were induced a few weeks since to make the attempt. After a few hours' talking with all the parties concerned, who were got together on the spot, the whole thing was arranged in the most amicable manner, to the entire satisfaction of all parties. But the mission of these gentlemen did not terminate there. The Government had lately laid out the site of a new village in the Motueka, and furnished the natives with a model on which to build their houses. This has been adopted by almost all – and the whole district, with the exception of one or two families, have engaged to build themselves wooden houses and abandon their filthy old pas. A small premium is to be given to those who get the first two or three houses completed, which will cause the whole to hasten their operations.
