Arthur IREDELL (1758-1818)

The Life and Correspondence of James Iredell by Griffith John McRee[1858] p13
Letter from Rev. Arthur Iredell, South Malling, April 30th, 1782 to James Iredell. My Dear James:- I shall not attempt to describe the emotions with which I received your letter of the 20th of January…No Gazette has such value in my eyes, as a simple sheet of paper which may satisfy me that you, my sister, and all your valuable connections are perfectly well, and as happy as people, whose country is the seat of war, can be… My mother resides almost constantly in London; and is happier there in the midst of bustle and confusion, which engage her attention and tend to amuse her, than she could be in any retired spot, where she would be left too much to the melancholy of her own thoughts. Charles is in the East Indies, in the fleet under Sir Edward Hughes. He is before this, without doubt, a Lieutenant. He went out to that station at the suggestion of Lord Macartney, who, you will have heard, has been appointed by our India Company Governor of Fort St. George…. Tom, after he quitted the militia, accepted a Lieutenancy of Marines (which, by the way, is a paltry provision for him), and is now in that service. I had left Cambridge last February, after I had taken by Degree. It may be necessary, perhaps, to tell you that I was of Trinity College. It is by no means clear to me that you have heard of it. Before I left College, I took Deacon's Orders, and an now, if not a main pillar, at least an humble support of the Church. I have, at present, no provision, nor have I any near, or even remote propect of any; but, like all pious and unprovided sons of the Church, I live in hopes of some humble benefice…

Letter from Rev. A. Iredell, London, Feb 21st, 1786 to James Iredell. My Dear Brother:- My friend, Mr Kempe, has lost, or rather got rid of, his wife, - a most fortunate event, for he may now live comfortably if he will – he has had no option before. I have already passed some time with him in Sussex; and he has desired me to consider Malling as my home, when I have no better place to go…
