John Parkinson and John Vincent Barrest, out on bail, were charged with creating a disturbance at the door of the Three Tuns public house after midnight on Saturday last. Defendants did not appear. Police-constable Baldwin stated that he had heard a great noise, and on going in the direction he found Parkinson and Barrett knocking at the door, and demanding admittance. He cautioned them, and advised then to go away, but instead of doing so they threatened him that they would report him at Scotland yard. He, with assistance, took them into custody. The Bench ordered them to pay 5s and costs.

Gravesend Reporter, North Kent and South Essex Advertiser 07 Sep 1861 Licenses
Several licenses which had not been signed last Wednesday, owing to the absence of parties, were now granted… Mr Moore, of the "Three Tuns" public-house, High-street, received his license with a caution from the bench, who told him that if disorderly characters were seen again frequenting his house the license would be withheld. Mr Moore said he could not prevent the persons complained of, who were tenants of the owner of the house in Three Tun Yard, from coming into his house. The bench advised him to take some steps to do so or his license would be jeopdardized.

John Wray, a labourer, working at the cement mills, Northfleet, was charged with assaulting Mr John Moore, the son of the landlady of the Three Tuns, High-street. The complainant deposed that on Saturday night, about 12 o'clock, he was closing the house for the night, when a mob of people assembled in front of the house and wanted to be served with some drink, which witness declined to do. They then became very noisy, and dragged witness into the street, and the prisoner then struck witness a violent blow, and he gave him into custody. The prisoner said he was very sorry; he was the worse for liquor or it would not have occurred. Fined 5s and 3s 6d costs, or seven day's imprisonment.

Gravesend Reporter, North Kent and South Essex Advertiser 18 Jul 1863
Alice Linton, the wife of a labourer, was charged with willfully breaing a square of glass at the Three Tuns public-house, High-street, on the previous evening. The case having been proved by Mr Moore, son of the landlady, the prisoner was fined 1s 6d damage and 3s 6d costs or ten days imprisonment.

Francis Moore, the landlady of the Three Tuns Public-house, High-street, was charged on summons with harbouring two Police-constables while on duty on Thursday morning last. P.S. Martin deposed that on Thursday morning last, about 4 o'clock, he was on duty visiting beats. On going up High-street he missed two constables off adjoining beats. On going to the back of the Three Tuns he saw a constables cap, and he went up stairs into a room and there saw two constables, one smoking a short pipe. He ordered them to their beats and reported the matter to the superintendent. The defendant's son said that they previously came into the house about 1 o'clock; he cautioned them about stopping in the house, and when they came in at 4 o'clock he repeatedly cautioned them to leave the house, as also did two other persons who were in the room, he having had a private supper party there. He called a witness who bore the defendant's statement out. Mr Supt. White said he had made every inquiry respecting the defendant's statement and found that it was quite correct. The bench said that they did not consider that he had harboured them, therefore the summons would be dismissed. Mr White said that the two constables would be taken before the Watch Committee to answer for their conduct.

James Hurley, a labourer in Northfleet dockyard, was charged with being drunk and riotous, and resisting the police, and also with assaulting John Moore, son of the landlady of the Three Tuns public-house, High-street. P.C. _ Barnashina deposted that on Saturday night between 11 and 12 o'clock he was on duty in High-street, when his attention was called to a mob of persons at the Three Tuns public-house, High-street. Witness went there and found it was caused by the prisoner who was drunk and fighting, witness cautioned him to go away, but he refused to go, and witness took him into custody. He had great difficulty in removing him to the station, in consequence of his resistance, as also of that of his companions; Serjeant Martin having come to his assistance, the prisoner was removed to the station house. John Moore deposed that he was the son of the landlady of the Three Tuns public house, on Saturday night the prisoner came into the bar, and went into the tap room, and made a great disturbance; on witness ordering him out he was very violent, and threw him on the ground. The prisoner denied the offence, and said the last witness was the aggressor. Mr White said that the prisoner was convicted at the Borough Sessions held Michaelmas, 1861, for a malicious assault on a man, when he was sentenced to twelve months imprisonment; he was a great trouble to the police, and was in custody on a charge of assault last Monday, but was discharged as the complainant lived a long way off. The bench said it was necessary to put a stop to the Northfleet Dockyard men creating a disturbance in the town of a Saturday night, they should make an example of them. Committed to Maidstone gaol for twenty eight days' with hard labour.

Thomas Efferen and Mary Collins were charged by P.C. Woodfine with being drunk and using abusive language, in High-street, on Saturday afternoon last. The constable stated that he was on duty in High-street on Saturday afternoon, between one and two o'clock, where he saw the prisoners drunk. He cautioned then, when they used abusive language, and he took the male prisoner into custody, and gave the woman in charge of a cabman. On the way to the station the prisoner Efferen was very violent and attempted to strike witness with a pick which he had in his hand, but was prevented from doing so my Mr Moore, jun., of the Three Tuns, who came to his (witness's) assistance. The prisoner stoutly denied attempting to strike the constable, but Mr Moore being called as a witness he fully corroborated that part of the constable's evidence. The bench committed the male prisoner for twenty eight days with hard labour, and fined the woman 5s., or seven days in default.

Frances Moore, landlady of the Three Tuns public-house, High-street, was summoned for allowing gambling in her house on Sunday afternoon last. She did not appear, but was represented by her son. John Hayes and another man deposed to being in the house on Sunday afternoon and to tossing for beer in the presence of the son of the landlady. The bench considered the charge proved, and ordered defendant to pay a fine of 7s and the costs.

Gravesend Reporter, North Kent and South Essex Advertiser 29 Sep 1866 Sales by Auction – Gravesend
Messrs Orgill and Swann are honoured with instructions from Mrs Moore, after a successful occupation of twenty-six years, to submit to Public Sale, at Mason's Hall, Mason's Avenue, Basinghall-street, City of London, on Monday, 15th of October 1866 at twelve for one o'clock (unless an acceptable offer be previously made), a freehold public house with possession, known as the Three Tuns, situate in the preferable part of and being No.44 High-street, Gravesend, Kent, together with the Stabling in the rear. A rare opportunity is here presented to the small capitalist to beneficially employ his means, either in a safe investment or in a remunerative occupation. If the latter be selected, it is suggested that a judicious and inexpensive outlay be made in modernizing the property compatable with the prevailing style of the day. May be viewed seven days prior to the day of Sale, by cards from the Auctioneers, and printed particulars then procured on the Premises; of G. E. Sharland, Esq., Solicitor, Town-hall, Gravesend, Kent; at Masons' Hall; and at the Auctioneers' Offices 21 Hart-street Bloomsbury, London, W.C.
