The Times 10 Nov 1863 Naval and Military Intelligence
The head-quarters of the 55th Regiment will embark this morning at 7 a.m. on board the hired sailing transport 'King Arthur', Captain Marshall, for conveyance to Madras, in the following strength:- Col. Robert Hume, and R. F. Dalton; Lieuts A. H. Kay, W. M. Frobisher, and W. King; Ensigns C. B. Bentham and Braddon; Adjutant O. S. D. Osborne; Surg. T. Parr; Instructor of Musketry, Lieut. T. Dunn; three officers' wives and four children; 23 sergeants, 8 drummers, 343 rank and file, 43 soldiers' wives and 66 children. The 'King Arthur' is an iron-built ship of 1,221 tons register and 233 ft in length over all. She was constructed in 1861 by Messrs Pile, Spence & Co., of Sunderland, for the East India trade, and is owned by Messrs Higgins and Co., of Leadenhall-street. She is an unusually fine, well-ventilated, and well-arranged ship for the conveyance of troops. Her cabin accomodation for officers and their families in the poop cabins is apparently all that the most fastidious can desire, especially for the ladies and children. The main deck, on which the troops will be berthed, is of great height from the planking of the deck to the lower part of the upper deck iron beams and the means of ventilation, in which the roomy hatchways of the ship largely assist, are as perfect as can be wished for on board ship. The arrangements of the messes and the sleeping arrangements are according to the excellent regulations laid down by the Horse-Guards and the hon. Council for India. The rank and file are messed and sleep forward of the main hatchway; next aft are the Staff, non-commissioned officers, &c., and abaft all, and screened in to themselves, are berthed the women and children. The officers and crew of the ship are berthed on the upper deck, the former in the usual house cabins amidships, and the crew under a roomy forecastle forward. The upper deck of the ship is very much arched with sluice waterways below the level of the deck, so that no large quantities of water can ever be washed across it in rough weather at sea. The stock of water carried in the hold is 244 tons, and the ship also carries a fresh water distilling apparatus in the galley capable of furnishing 60 gallons per day. The fore and mainmasts are of iron, and the mizen is of wood. The rigging and gear aloft are to all appearance of the best quality. The fore and maintopsails are Cunningham's patent. The boats are fitted with Clifford's patent lowering apparatus, of the efficiency of which at sea the officers on board speak, from their past experience, in enthusiastic terms. The ship's ground tackle consists of a Trotman and common anchor in use, with the usual spare gear. All the cables on board were officially tested before leaving the Victoria Docks. In the gale of Friday the ship was brought to an anchor under Dungeness, the Trotman anchor being let go. This, the ship's officers state, never moved an inch after touching the ground, although it was their belief that the common anchor would not have held the ship in the position she was then in against the gale. Should the weather be favourable, the 'King Arthur' will start on her voyage from Portsmouth this afternoon.

Jackson's Oxford Journal 17 Apr 1869 Sudden death of Mr Charles Hoare
A large circle of relations and friends have just sustained a severe bereavement by the premature death, at the age of 49, of the above gentleman, who expired under painfully sudden circumstances on Sunday, April 4. Mr Charles Hoare was the son of the late Mr George Matthew Hoare, of Mordon Hall, in Surrey, one of the founders of the Red Lion Brewery in Lower East Smithfield, and collaterally related to the great banking firm of Fleet-street. Mr Hoare was educated at Rugby, whence he proceeded to Christ Church, Oxford. After making the "grand tour" he married the daughter of the Rev. Mr Twysden, Vicar of Kingsbridge, Devon, and subsequently applied himself to the management of his father's brewery, of which, though it has largely increased its operations of late years, he survived to be the sole acting partner. Mr Hoare was at the brewery on Friday the 2nd inst., and left town on the evening of that day to join Mrs Hoare and his only son, a youth of 18, now at Oxford, who were staying on a visit with his friend Mr Dalgety, in Hampshire. It was remarked that he was in his usual good health on Saturday and Sunday, and about 5 o'clock in the afternoon on the latter day he was smoking a cigar on the lawn, when Mr Dalgety suggested that dinner would be ready and they had better join the ladies. Mr Hoare rose from his seat on a garden chair, and, appearing to stumble, suddenly recovered himself for a moment, and, again falling forward, instantaneously expired. Medical aid was soon on the spot, but unhappily only to declare that death had resulted from disease of the heart. The deceased, who was very widely esteemed, was a great patron of athletic sports, and especially of cricket. He was himself formerly one of the All England Eleven, and for many years he acted as President and Treasurer of the Surrey Cricket Club, as well as being a member of the Committee of Lords' Cricket Ground.

Sheffield Independent 06 Apr 1893 Marriage of Sir J. Fergusson
Early yesterday morning, at St Paul's Church, Knightsbridge, London, with plain service, the marriage took place of the Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson, M.P. for the North-East Division of Manchester, who was Postmaster-General under the late Government, with Mr Charles Hugh Hoare, widow of the late Mrs Charles Hugh Hoare, and daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Twysden, M.A., rector of Charlton, Kingsbridge, Devon. The service was conducted by the Rev the Hon. A. F. A. Hanbury-Tracy, M.A., vicar of Frome, and brother of the present Lord Sudeley, of Toddington. The bride was given away by her brother, Captain J. Stevenson Twysden, R.N., of Charlton, Kingsbridge, and the bridegroom was attended by his eldest son, Lieutenant and Adjutant Charles Fergusson, of the 1st Battalion Grenadier Guards, as best man. The bride was married in a magnificent gown of petunia velvet, bordered with antique gold embroidery, and waistcoat of white lace. She also wore a handsome bonnet of petunia velvet ornamented with gold embroidery, and carried a bouquet of lily of the valley interwoven with Neapolitan violets, and tied with broad white satin streamers. Only near relatives of the contracting parties were present. Among them were Mrs Boyle, Lady Helen Boyle, the Rev. Hamilton Fergusson, Miss Hamilton Fergusson, Mr J. Hamilton Fergusson, Captain and Mrs Twysden, Sir Charles Dalrymple, Misses Dalrymple, Master Dalrymple, Col. Stacey, Mr and Mrs H. C. Seymour Hoare, Miss S. Hanbury-Tracy, Miss Fergusson, Mrs George Baird, Mr, Mrs., and Miss Walter Screw, Mr C. J. Hoare, the Hon. Mrs Hanbury-Tracy, Miss Hanbury-Tracy, &c. Afterwards a reception was given at the bride's residence, 102, Eaton place. In the afternoon Sir James and Lady Fergusson left for Balbeg, Ayrshire, a seat of the bridegroom, for their honeymoon. The presents included a very handsome silver bowl on ebony stand, Graeco-Roman style, with bas-relief decorations, copied from a fountain at Villa Albani, near Rome, the combined gift of five Conservative clubs in North-East Manchester. This is Sir James Fergusson's third marriage. He was first married in 1857 to Lady Edith Ramsay, second daughter of the Marquis of Dalhousie, who died in 1871, and secondly in 1873 to Olive, daughter of Mr John Richman, of South Australia, who died in 1882.
